Learn, connect, and enrich your practice at the ADRIO end-of-year Meet 'N' Greet. This event is the perfect opportunity to meet colleagues over dinner and connect on matters of common interest.

We are bringing back "Table Talk," an excellent interactive format that will allow you to meet practitioners chosen for their expertise in a wide variety of subject matters related to ADR. Table Talk topics include:

Indigenous Reconciliation and Advancement at ADRIO

Bob Waldon, M.A., Q.Med (Indigenous Relations Working Group)

The ADRIO Indigenous Reconciliation and Advancement working group (IRAWG), brings ADRIO members together who have experience, interest, curiosity and willingness to seek closer alignment between our ADR community of practice in Ontario and Indigenous peoples. Our intention is to foster growth in ADRIO, as an organization that is appropriately engaged in the work of Indigenous Reconciliation and Advancement, both within our organization, and as part of its place in the ADR community of practice and broader society. In short, we want to have Indigenous understandings integrated throughout ADRIO, to create a community of practice that is competent to stand with Indigenous peoples in the process of truth-telling, Reconciliation and co-existence within the Canadian experience. As an ADRIO member, your thoughts, ideas, inspiration are needed to move this important initiative forward. Help us build a shared vision and path forward. Bring your voice to the conversation.

Insights into Insurance Mediations Denise Robertson, Q.Med (Insurance Section)

Insurance Mediations follow a structured format with specific references to legal concepts and doctrines. Settlements are assessed on an evaluation of specific heads of damages. The mediator is expected to have an understanding of the fundamentals and how they are quantified. Our intention is to offer an opportunity to broaden individual knowledge in these areas and to discuss the role the Insurance Adjuster plays in reaching settlement.

Let's Talk About Different Applications for Conflict Management Coaching

Shelley Stirling Boyes, Mediator, Facilitator & Heather Swartz M.S.W., C. Med., Cert. F. Med. (Conflict Management Coaching Section)

As the field of conflict management coaching (also known as conflict coaching) continues to grow in the ADR field, the applications also expand. This individualized process provides mediators, lawyers, facilitators, restorative process practitioners and others with an additional tool to help clients participate more effectively in managing conflict. Conflict coaching can be done in tandem with other ADR process or separately for those clients who want an increased ability to manage their conflicts independently. Please join Shelley Stirling-Boyes and Heather Swartz as they facilitate a discussion on this process and its different applications. We welcome your experiences with conflict management coaching and your questions about this ADR technique.

Personal Conflict, Structural Fixes: The World of Closely-Held Companies & Family Businesses

Michael Erdle, C.Med, C.Arb, FCIArb & Daryl Landau, M.A., M.S., Acc.FM (Business-Commercial Section)

Disputes among the owners of closely-held and family businesses can get very personal. The ADR practitioner is expected to be a sounding-board, coach, peacemaker and adjudicator. Join us to share ideas on defining our role, working with other business advisors, and resolving these complex business and personal conflicts

What Is The Future of Restorative Justice? John Becker, Q.Med (Restorative Justice Section)

The Restorative Justice Section serves practitioners with a wide range of intentions, capacities and applications. Participants are dedicated to the transformative possibilities intrinsic to such areas as circle keeping, community mediation, victim-offender reconciliation, harm reduction, social activism and social work. The Restorative Justice Section is the alternative in alternative dispute resolution. Section meetings are the laboratory for arts-based practices, the workshop for innovative collaborations and the hospitality suite for aspiring professionals and new ADRIO members.
